Featured Artist: Kate McGarrigle, Canadian singer-songwriter, who, with her sister Anna, wrote and performed some of the most beautiful folk music of the last 35 years. Their career took off in the early 70s, when their songs were recorded by Maria Muldaur and Linda Ronstadt and they signed to Warner Bros. Although they released ten critically acclaimed albums, their greatest commercial success came from these and other covers by artists such as Emmylou Harris and Judy Collins. Commitment to family always took precedence over career. In 1970 Kate married Loudon Wainwright III – their two children, Rufus and Martha Wainwright become highly successful and innovative artists in their own right. (Kate and Loudon divorced in 1978.) The sisters collaborated with a diverse range of performers from Joan Baez to The Chieftains, to Nick Cave. Their work was honoured by many awards including the Order of Canada in 1994 and Lifetime Achievement Awards from ASCAP in 2005. Some time ago Kate was diagnosed with clear cell sarcoma which finally took her life on 18 January 2010. She was 63.
